

Marking, Assessment and Reports Policy Senior School

1. Aims

This policy provides guidance in:

- Marking classwork and homework
- Assigning grades for half-termly and termly assessments and reports
- The writing of full reports

All departments should adhere to the policy. However, it is understood that more detailed subject-specific requirements will be outlined in departmental documentation.

2. General Principles For Marking Student Work At Kent College:

2.1 At Kent College we believe that effective feedback plays an essential role in enabling our pupils to develop academically.

2.2 We recognise that regular grades and numerical marks can be detrimental to a pupil's perception of themselves as learners and can distract from the feedback and direction they are given. Noting this, grades will not always be given in response to pupils' work, as is appropriate to each task.

2.3 In place of grading all work, staff will mark and give feedback in a manner that encourages pupils to engage actively with the learning process. Comments should be constructive, enabling the pupil to identify their successes (learning that has been consolidated) and mistakes (learning that is still developing). Manageable targets should be created. Staff should give pupils time to engage with the feedback in lessons and may ask them to set their own targets.

2.4 Teachers should be aware of any special educational needs and issues such as dyslexia, dyspraxia, organisational difficulties etc. In these cases, comments should focus on content and subject-specific language. Problems with Standard English should be communicated to relevant support staff. Rather than correcting every mistake, focus on a persistent error.

2.5 While we envisage that most work will be marked with constructive feedback only, certain key assessments may be graded. Departments may mark such work numerically or use a department specific version of the Progress Grades used for reporting. However, staff will still give detailed feedback and expect pupils to engage with their targets.

2.6 For some tasks related to GCSE and A-level work, staff will utilise grades. Departments should link their grades and comments to the criteria set out by examination boards. Staff will still give detailed feedback and expect pupils to engage with their targets. Pupils should be advised that marks given for homework are not predicted grades and that even coursework marks are subject to external moderation.

2.7 Most work should be returned within one week in line with the Homework Charter. Pupils should understand that longer pieces of work may take longer to mark.

3. The Kent College Assessment and Reporting System:

All pupils receive regular half-termly grades. See the following reporting and assessment overview for approximate timings. These grades, which will be entered onto the school's administrative system, iSAMS, should be based on the marks given for homework as well as for work done in class. Teachers are expected to keep a record of these marks in their mark book. Departments should maintain a tracking system for each student in their department Sharepoint area. An overview of all published grades is also held in a central tracking area on Sharepoint.

3.1 Reporting and Assessment Overview

The approximate timings of key events are below:

3.2 Grades for Academic Work

Grades and reports are opened on the School's MIS (iSAMS) early in the term and remain open until the deadline. Therefore, it is possible to assign grades, write reports and make amendments at any stage in the cycle. Please note that the deadline is the same for all year groups and teachers are advised to plan ahead accordingly. All grades and reports should be completed by 2pm on the day of the deadline.

3.3 Lower School

- i) In Years 7 to 9, pupils are given half termly grades in each subject based on their Attitude to Learning (ATL) – see Appendix 1. Research shows that effort is the key to success, so the purpose of these ATL grades is to help pupils identify how they can improve in their essential work habits. They are assessed on three areas: Resilience, Reliability and Respect. Staff should use a “best fit” approach in applying these grades, though the published descriptors set clear requirements. Tutors should use these grades as a starting point to set targets for improvement.
- ii) At the start of Year 7, 10 and the L6, pupils sit standardised tests (MidYIS, Yellis and Alis) that generate predicted grades for examinations. The school utilises these predictions to generate Grade Ranges that are shared with families. It is the expectation for Kent College students to make between 1 and 2 grades progress during their time at the school. As a result, each Grade Range will cover three grades, with the lowest being that predicted by the standardised test. For instance, a student who was predicted a 4 in English would receive a Grade Range of 4-6.
- iii) In the end of term report, pupils are also given a Progress Grade (PG1-5) (See Appendix 1) for each subject along with their ATL grades and Grade ranges. The Progress Grade is designed to show where the pupil is in terms of her own progress in relation to her Grade Ranges. The new progress grades are trajectory grades, not a measure of current GCSE/A level performance (i.e. were pupils to sit papers at that time). This is an important distinction particularly in the awarding of Lower School grades. For instance, in Year 7 most students will, of course, not yet be completing high grade GCSE level work, but will be showing the aptitudes and potential that should enable staff to make a judgement of possible outcomes. This will inevitably mean considering attitude to work as well as aptitude at this stage.
- iv) At the end of the year all pupils will sit summative assessments. For Year 7 and 8, students will sit formal internal examinations in Maths, English and the Sciences, alongside in class assessments in other subjects. In Year 9 students will sit formal examinations in most subjects.

3.4 Middle School and Sixth Form

- i) Year 10 is something of a transition year. We begin the year using ATL grades and Progress Grades, but move towards GCSE based grading as the year proceeds. These are termed as Working at Grades and reflect current performance in relation to GCSE criteria.

- ii) In Year 11 and in the Sixth form we continue to use ATL grades but also utilise the grading system appropriate to GCSE and A-Level. Pupils are also given grades based on their current rate of progress. Teachers may assign 'slash' grades (e.g. A/B) for pupils who are working at the borderline between two grades. The following grades are available:
- GCSE grading 1 – 9 (9 being the highest)
 - A Level courses: A*, A, B, C, D, E, U (plus borderline grades)
- iii) Year 10 will sit formal "mock style" GCSE examinations in the summer term. Year 11 will sit formal mocks in late November. The Lower Sixth will sit in class summative assessments in February and formal mocks in June. The Upper Sixth will sit formal mocks in January. Year 11 and Upper Sixth mocks will be sat in the examination space utilised for final external examinations.

3.5 Subject teacher's reports

In combination with regular grades and parents evenings, teachers will write an extended report at least once per year.

Reports should:

- be well written, with correct grammar and spelling.
- contain at least one clear target for academic improvement;
- be written on a 'no surprises' basis. Parents should not learn of substantive issues/ concerns from reports but should endorse / follow up communication with home;
- be personalised/bespoke to each pupil;
- be positive and encouraging but honest. Comments such as "she never puts up her hand," or "she is quiet in class" are unhelpful and negative in tone;
- offer constructive advice on how the pupil can improve;
- communicate high expectations to the pupil and parents.

Reports may be brief (for example, three or four sentences), and the use of unnecessary educational jargon is to be avoided.

3.6 Form tutor's reports

Reports should:

- comment on her participation in form activities;
- discuss any pastoral issues of note;
- identify additional contributions to school life such as participation in teams or performances in dramatic or musical productions;
- identify any additional responsibilities such as form captain or eco/charity rep.

3.7 House Parent's report for boarders

These reports should:

- encourage and praise student development - especially personal development;
- point out any concerns;
- comment on balance between work and activities in the boarding house;
- highlight contribution to the life of the boarding community;
- mention any active participation in boarding house events;
- comment on the way responsibilities have been carried out.

3.8 Senior leader's report

This will summarise the report, commenting on both academic, extracurricular and pastoral progress as appropriate.

3.9. Parents evenings

During the year families of each Year group will be offered an online parents evening to discuss progress. In addition, each Year group will be offered an additional face-to-face evening. This might be a meeting with the student's tutor to discuss performance, or an information evening focused on future study options.
